

CITY OF SEATTLE 2013 STATE LEGISLATIVE BULLETIN

APRIL 15, 2013

NUMBER 13

Week Overview

The House released their operating budget proposal on Wednesday this week, and the bill passed the House floor on Friday evening. This budget proposes to invest $1.9 billion more in K-12 schools in the next biennium and retains funding for the safety net without making cuts to local shared revenues, largely by including revenue from ending tax exemptions. The House and Senate also both released their capital budget proposals and passed those bills out of the committees.

Legislators also met with Governor Inslee this week to discuss ways to reduce the incidences of people driving while under the influence, and legislators are now making efforts to move legislation forward before the end of the session. We thank Senator Adam Kline for his leadership on this issue.

April 17th is the next significant cutoff, when policy bills need to pass the opposite house in order to continue moving.
